Concurrent Enrollment Program

The Concurrent Enrollment Program fosters partnerships between UW Colleges campuses and regional high schools in an effort to enhance the educational opportunities for students. Through these partnerships, students at some area high schools can enroll for both high school and college credit when they take certain classes during their high school career. Classes will be taught by college-approved high school teachers.

Review of potential instructors for our partnership takes place in two phases: instructor credentials and curricular offerings. First, the appropriate UW Colleges department will look at a resume and undergraduate/graduate transcripts from a potential instructor. Should that instructor be approved to teach in the UW Colleges, a review of the curriculum of the proposed course would be undertaken. Further information about the process can be found in the Protocol/Process as well as the UW System Administrative Policy 185.
