Assistant Professor of Psychology
University of Wisconsin-Baraboo/Sauk County

The Department of Psychology & Education at the University of Wisconsin Colleges invites applications for a full-time tenure-track Assistant Professor of Psychology at the UW-Baraboo/Sauk County campus to start in the Fall of 2016.

QUALIFICATIONS
A doctorate in psychology or closely related field from an accredited institution is required.

RESPONSIBILITIES
The academic year teaching assignment is 24 credits and includes first and second year undergraduate psychology courses. A typical load includes four three credit course sections, with no more than three course preparations per semester. Preference will be provided for candidates with experience teaching Introductory Psychology as well as Developmental Psychology. Given the selected incumbent’s area of expertise and campus needs, other teaching courses may include: Statistics, Social Psychology, Personality, Abnormal Psychology, Educational Psychology, Psychology of Gender, Behavioral Neuroscience, and Psychological Perspectives on Diversity Issues.

As teacher-scholars, we seek candidates with experience engaging diverse populations, have principal instructor experience teaching university freshman-sophomore level courses, interest or experience in first-year experiences, collaborative learning, instructional technology, and distance education. Additional opportunities may exist to engage in interdisciplinary/collaborative courses, to develop service learning projects, and to collaborate with other educational and community organizations to enhance applied learning opportunities. This tenure-track position requires teaching excellence, scholarly activity in the discipline, a commitment to professional development and active engagement in department, campus, institutional, and community service.

CAMPUS INFORMATION
